(Bayer, torn, x, p. 378--402, &c. Grotius. Prolegomen. ad Hist. Goth. p. 99.) + Constantino only reckons seven cataracts, of which he gives the Russian and Slavonic names; but thirteen are enumerated by the Sieur de Beauplan, a French engineer, who had surveyed the course and navigation of the Dnieper or Borysthenes (Description de l'Ukraine. Constantinople admitted the annual visit of the strangers of the North. They returned at the stated seasons with a rich cargo of corn, wine, and oil, the manufactures of Greece, and the spices of India. Some of their countrymen resided in the capital and provinces; and the national treaties protected the persons, effects, and privileges of the Russian merchant. But the same communication which had been opened for the benefit, was soon abused for the injury, of mankind. In a period of one hundred and ninety years, the Russians made four attempts to plunder the treasures of Constantinople; the event was various; but the motive, the means, and the object, were the same in these naval expeditions, the Russian traders had seen the magnificence and tasted the luxury of the city of the Cæsars. A marvellous tale, and a scanty supply, excited the desires of their-savage countrymen; they envied the gifts of nature which their climate denied; they coveted the works of art which they were too lazy to imitate, and too indigent to purchase; the Varangian princes unfurled the banners of piratical adventure, and their bravest soldiers were drawn from the nations that dwelt in the Northern isles of the ocean. The image of their naval armaments was revived in the last century, in the fleets of...
