

Modern Musicians: A Book for Players, Singers & Listeners (Classic Reprint)

Master Musicians, published in 1909. Like that work, it concerns itself rather with the musicians themselves than with their compositions or their achievements. It does not profess to be technical: indeed, it explicitly avoids the technical, though there is a perhaps excusable suggestion of the technical in the opening chapters. Moreover, the author does not claim to have made a complete, or probably even the best possible selection, of names. Space is limited; and to have included all the names familiar to the musical public, would have meant the book resolving itself into a series of dictionary notices. That kind of thing was never in the author's mind, and is repugnant to him. Here, in a word, are simply some chapters in intimate musical biography; written in a popular style, and meant chiefly for popular reading. The collecting of materials has naturally been difficult, since, with one or two exceptions, no books have been published on the various personalities dealt with. I am greatly indebted to the musical magazines of the last ten or twelve years, and, especially as regards the violinists and cellists, to the Strad. I gratefully mention also the works of the American writer, Mr. Henry C. Lahee, on Pianists, Singers, and Violinists. J. C. H. EDINBURGH, Midsummer (Typographical errors above are due to OCR software and do not occur in the book.)
